<!-- ABOUT -->

This year, I officially transitioned from a career in education to tech, but I've always been passionate about websites as you can see from the long list of web-related roles I have filled since I graduated high school.

During my time teaching, I mastered observing behavior, clearly communicating directions, and fully understanding people in order to anticipate their struggles. These skills are my strengths as a developer, designer, and problem solver.

I'm proud of the skills I developed as an educator and look forward to combining them with my coding knowledge for my next role.
